

Footy Senses

The author, Neridah McMullin, uses detail to help readers imagine the sensations spectators feel while watching Collingwood train at Victoria Park. Not only does she describe what Tom and his grandpa can see, she also describes other sensations they experience. One example is:

The smell of liniment and mud wafted through the air. Tom inhaled deeply – it was the smell of football.

Imagine yourself at an AFL game. Describe the sensations you experience via each of your senses:

Liniment and mud
